Stockland has welcomed its first food and beverage retailer, The Naked Duck, to its innovation precinct for life sciences and technology in Macquarie Park, MPark.

The Naked Duck combines French, Australian, and Asian cooking techniques to offer healthy, fresh and high-quality food, while serving its unique Naked coffee blend sourced from multiple countries.

Stockland Development Director, Frank Ianni, said contemporary and delicious food with great coffee is a must-have for any thriving workplace.

“The Naked Duck will become a meeting place for people to come together to enjoy quality food and coffee at our first completed workplace building – 11 Khartoum Road,” Mr Ianni said.

“Our tenants have been eagerly awaiting the opening of The Naked Duck as a place to re-fuel, network, and collaborate, and the liquor license is sure to make it a destination for special corporate occasions and socialising after work.”

Director of The Duck Group, Amy Le, said we’re excited to add MPark to our rapidly growing portfolio and offer the growing workplace community at MPark quality food served fresh daily and our signature Naked blend coffee exclusive to our café.

“We look forward to becoming part of the MPark community and sharing our food philosophy, love of healthy eating and authentic culinary experiences that The Naked Duck is known for,” Ms Lee said.

In addition to their 132-square metre café in the building’s lobby, The Naked Duck will also be able to provide catering services to MPark businesses and the surrounding community.

About MPark

MPark is a $2 billion innovation precinct for technology and life sciences in the heart of the Macquarie Park Innovation District, 12 kilometres north of the City of Sydney.

Upon completion, MPark Stage 1 will comprise three workplace buildings at 11, 15, and 17 Khartoum Road, retail, a data centre, and a 2,500 square metre open park.

The first completed workplace at 11 Khartoum Road has welcomed tenants Audika, Axis, CHEP, and WiSE Medical.
